The Fundació Joan Miró – Centre for Contemporary Art Studies (hereinafter, the 'Fundació') is a private entity governed by a Board of Trustees that is made up of representatives from Joan Miró's circle, as well as from the worlds of art and business, the Government of Catalonia, the Barcelona City Council and Spain's Ministry of Culture. Set up by the artist himself, the Fundació boasts an exceptional Joan Miró collection and documentary holdings.

Since opening to the public on 10 June 1975, the Fundació has become a dynamic space where Joan Miró's art coexists with the most contemporary artistic creations. Housed in a building designed by Josep Lluís Sert, it is a unique example of a monographic museum in which the artist and architect established a dialogue of cooperation between the artwork, the architecture and the natural surroundings.

Over the past fifty years, the Fundació Joan Miró has built a cultural project with major local and international impact, centred on disseminating Joan Miró's work and ideas, as well as fostering ongoing dialogue with contemporary creation. As part of its 50th anniversary, the project is being developed with a renewed perspective that reinforces the Fundació's desire to establish itself as a leading artistic institution that plays an active role in cultural, social and intellectual life both within and beyond the city.

In accordance with its current statutes, the Fundació's aims are as follows:

- d) In line with the aim expressed in the previous point, to reproduce, distribute and publicly communicate works of an artistic nature, especially books and written and graphic documents, as well as sound and audiovisual works, in any format and modality, in accordance with current legislation.

e) To award prizes, scholarships and rewards in order to help awaken vocations and train young artists, as well as support them in their endeavours and promote and recognise their works.

f) To carry out any other activity that establishes the Fundació as the world's leading Joan Miró museum, enabling the presentation of an ambitious and inspiring artistic programme for all audiences and promoting the artistic development of present and future generations.

The Fundació's annual budget is around 14 million euros, and the organisation depends on a team of approximately 80 people.
