The Fundació Joan Miró offers new digital proposals for home

Barcelona, 20 March 2020. As you know, for the safety and protection of our visitors and staff, the Fundació Joan Miró is closed to the public –for the moment, until 12 April.

At the Fundació Joan Miró we believe that art can be relevant to everyone at all times and under all sorts of circumstances. Now more than ever, art can help us channel our thoughts and emotions, generate well-being, broaden our horizons and liven up our days. For this reason, during the closure of the museum and the confinement of citizens, the public life of the Fundació Joan Miró and the work of all its teams does not stop, it moves to the virtual world through the initiative Miró at home.

This online content project encompasses a series of digital communication actions aimed at bringing Miró's work and figure closer to the museum's virtual community, as well as maintaining the public activity of the Fundació Joan Miró during this time. Miró at home expresses the institution's vocation to become a dynamic museum and open to all, which prioritizes shared knowledge at all times and, especially, in a situation like the present.

With this aim in mind, we have started up Miró at Home, an online project for people of all ages: we will inspire you with Joan Miró's art, propose games and activities to spark creativity at home, and reveal some of our most hidden secrets. Stay in touch with our social media and follow #Miróathome.

Miró in play New collection of educational resources for gaining deeper different aspects of Joan Miró: his life, oeuvre, and his work processes. You'll find the first game, The Mysterious Soup, in the family resources section. Observe, create, and have fun with this set of games for children of all ages!

Read Miró Several different individuals read Miró in the Fundació's library. Many voices give their voice to Miró. Wherever you are, get to know the artist through letters, essays and pieces of art criticism.

Play Miró This selection of videos offers an overview of Joan Miró's life and work, aimed at families and audiences of all ages. From your home, open your eyes and discover some of the artist's most important pieces and the different periods in his life and his art.

In this necessary period of confinement and social discipline, we want to feel close. Wherever you are, we want to bring you art and well-being. We will love to hear about you and talk to you through our channels. The Joan Miró Foundation is looking forward to welcoming you back to its exhibition rooms soon. In the meantime, let's take care of each other.
