The JOAN MIRÓ PRIZE is organized by the Joan Miró Foundation in Barcelona in collaboration with Obra Social “la Caixa”, which assumes as its own the agreement existing with Fundació Caixa Girona. Their collaboration stems from a common desire to promote culture at large and the visual arts in particular.

The statutes of the Joan Miró Foundation include among its objectives that of awarding prizes in order to assist artists and to promote and valorize their work, as well as engaging in any other activity aimed at contributing to a better understanding of art and to the improvement of aesthetic sensibility in present and future generations.

In addition, one of the duties of the Foundation is to contribute to a better knowledge of the work and personality of Joan Miró, one of the most influential artists of the 20th century. In this respect, the creation of the JOAN MIRÓ PRIZE will help maintain a connection between the Catalan artist and the development of contemporary art. The Prize will add prestige to the winning artist whose work should be inspired by the same spirit of research that characterized the work of Joan Miró.

The JOAN MIRÓ PRIZE, consisting of a cash award of 70,000 €, is one of the best-endowed among existing art awards and is given to an artist, regardless of age, nationality or gender, whose work constitutes an outstanding contribution to current art practices along the spirit of research, innovation, engagement and freedom that characterized the life and work of Joan Miró.

An international jury composed of contemporary art specialists who might change with each edition proposes the candidates and selects the eventual winner. The jury always include a representative of the Joan Miró Foundation.

The Joan Miró Foundation will organize an exhibition of the winning artist.

Vicente Todolí’s career in the visual arts spans twenty years, and includes positions such as chief curator (1986-88), and later artistic director (1988-96), of IVAM (Institut Valencià d’Art Modern) in Valencia. In 1996 he left IVAM to join the Museu Serralves as its founding director.

He was a member of the jury and of the advisory committee of the 1995 edition of Carnegie International and acted as advisor in the exhibition “Future, Past, Present”, curated by Germano Celant for the Venice Biennale in 1997. He advises the director of the MACBA and currently serves on the museum's commission that reviews potential acquisitions. He is a member of the board of Manifesta, the European biennial exhibition, and is on the advisory board of the Serralves Museum. In addition, he is on the jury for the Guggenheim Foundation Hugo Boss Prize.

At IVAM he curated exhibitions of artists such as John Baldessari, Richard Prince, Reiner Ruthenbeck, James Rosenquist, Richard Tuttle, Per Kirkeby, Tony Cragg, Juan Muñoz, Julião Sarmento, Guillermo Kuitca, Cildo Meireles, and Pedro Cabrita Reis. At the Museu Serralves, he curated the shows of James Lee Byars, Franz West, Gary Hill, Hamish Fulton, Lothar Baumgarten, Fischli & Weiss, Roni Horn, Claes Oldenburg and Coosje van Bruggen, Richard Hamilton/Dieter Roth, and Francis Bacon. He was co-curator of the Portuguese pavilion at the Venice Biennale in 2003. At Tate Modern he has curated exhibitions of Sigmar Polke, Robert Frank, and Fischli & Weiss.

Born in Valencia, his background includes graduate studies in art history as a Fulbright scholar at Yale University and City University of New York. He was an ISP fellow at the Whitney Museum of American Art in 1984-85.
POUL ERIK TØJNER

Director of the Louisiana Museum of Modern Art

In 2000 he took up the post as director of the Louisiana Museum of Modern Art – a multifaceted institution that involves most of the arts and plays a central role in the presentation of international art and culture in Scandinavia. Architecture plays a special role in the Louisiana Museum’s exhibition profile, and the institution is itself famous for its distinctive fusion of art, architecture and landscape. He is also Director of the Louisiana Foundation and Director of the Museum Foundation.

Throughout his studies Poul Erik Tøjner has worked across disciplines – philosophy, art, literature and architecture. He has published books on all these subjects and for several years he worked for various Danish newspapers; most recently as cultural editor and member of the top editorial staff of the weekly Weekendavisen 1997-2000: Member of Editors-in-Chief (weekly newspaper “Weekendavisen”).

In addition Poul Erik Tøjner is a member of a number of Danish and international boards, which brings him into contact with artists and colleagues all over the world. Among others: Gyldendal (Denmark’s biggest publishing firm), C. L. David Foundation, The Danish Academy.

Adviser for international institutions, a.o.t. a new Renzo Piano museum building project in Oslo, Norway (expected opening in 2011).

Has written several books “Per Kirkeby – Paintings” and “Per Kirkeby – Sculpture”, “Munch: In His Own Words”, “Roy Lichtenstein: All about Art”, “Cézanne and Giacometti”.

JOAN MIRÓ PRIZE 2011
THIRD EDITION

WINNER: MONA HATOUM

DECISION OF THE JURY

Why Mona Hatoum? A word from the jury of the 2011 Joan Miró Prize

The jury of the third edition of the Joan Miró Prize has unanimously decided that the artist who is currently the best candidate for the award is Mona Hatoum.

After Olafur Eliasson (2007) and Pipilotti Rist (2009), the choice of Ms. Hatoum as recipient brings a new aspect to the Joan Miró Prize. With Eliasson, the jury highlighted the artist’s zeal to explore new dimensions and horizons, a trait he shares with Miró. With Rist, the jury emphasised the artist’s free portrayal of personal and collective consciousness through a boundless imaginary of form and colour.

With Hatoum, the jury is drawing attention to an artist’s ability to connect personal experience with universal values. Ms. Hatoum was single-handedly able to open up art practices to non-Western realities while showing the links between Western high culture and transnational political and cultural events. After Hatoum, the art world has become a far more open and less self-centred arena, a process that has not ceased to expand and reaffirm itself. Hatoum’s commitment to human values of concern to all cultures and societies is similar to Miró’s view of mankind after experiencing three devastating wars. It is for these points of confluence that the jury has unanimously chosen to award the third Joan Miró Prize to Mona Hatoum.

Barcelona, December 2010
ARTIST’S STATEMENT

I am extremely honoured to have been chosen as the recipient of this year’s Joan Miró Prize. Reading the Jury’s statement was a heartening experience. I am sincerely grateful for their very appreciative comments and appraisal of my work and for attributing a great significance to my contribution to the art world.

Mona Hatoum, January 2011
Mona Hatoum was born into a Palestinian family in Beirut in 1952 and since 1975 has lived and worked in London. She originally went to England on a visit and stayed on when the outbreak of the civil war in Lebanon prevented her returning.

After studying at the Byam Shaw and the Slade School of Art in London, Hatoum first became widely known in the mid 80s for a series of performance and video works that focused with great intensity on the body. Since the beginning of the ’90s her work moved increasingly towards large-scale installation works that aim to engage the viewer in conflicting emotions of desire and revulsion, fear and fascination. Hatoum has developed a language in which familiar, domestic everyday objects like chairs, beds, cots and kitchen utensils are often transformed into foreign, threatening and sometimes dangerous objects. Even the human body is rendered unfamiliar in ‘Corps étranger’ (1994), a video installation that displays an endoscopic journey through the interior landscape of her own body.

Hatoum's work has been exhibited widely in solo exhibitions in Europe, the United States, Canada and Australia. In 1997-98 a survey of her work was organised by the Museum of Contemporary Art, Chicago and toured to The New Museum of Contemporary Art, New York, MoMA, Oxford and the Scottish National Gallery of Modern Art, Edinburgh (1998).

Other solo exhibitions include Centre Georges Pompidou, Paris (1994), Castello di Rivoli, Turin (1999), 'Domestic Disturbance', Site Santa Fe and Mass MoCA (2000-2001), and a major survey of her work at the Centro de Arte de Salamanca and the Centro Galego de Arte Contemporánea, Spain (2002-03).
Her exhibition 'The Entire World as a Foreign Land' was the inaugural exhibition for the launch of Tate Britain, London in 2000. In 2004 the largest and most comprehensive survey of her work, including new site-specific pieces, was initiated by the Hamburger Kunsthalle and traveled to Kunstmuseum Bonn, Magasin 3 Stockholm Konsthall and the Sydney Museum of Contemporary Art (2005). In 2009 a large exhibition of her work was shown at the Ullens Center for Contemporary Art, Beijing and she created a number of new works for her solo exhibition at the Palazzo Querini Stampalia in Venice.

She has also participated in the 1995 Venice Biennale, the 1995 İstanbul Biennial, Documenta XI in 2002, the 2005 Venice Biennale, the 15th Biennale of Sydney in 2006, the 3rd Auckland Triennial, the 8th Sharjah Biennale in 2007 and the 3rd Bucharest Biennale in 2008 and the XIII Biennale Donna, Ferrara was entirely devoted to a solo exhibition of Mona Hatoum’s work.

Hatoum was Artist-in-Residence on the DAAD program (Berliner Künstlerprogramm, Deutscher Akademischer Austauschdienst ) in 2003-2004 and has since divided her time between Berlin and London.

Hatoum was the 2004 recipient of the prestigious Sonning Prize given biennially by the University of Copenhagen. And in the same year she was also awarded the Roswitha Haftmann Stiftung prize from Zurich. In 2008 she was the visual arts laureate of the Rolf Schock Prize given by the Royal Swedish Academy of Fine Arts in Stockholm. She is also the recipient of the Käthe-Kollwitz-Preis 2010 given by the Akademie der Künste in Berlin.

Please note: Although Mona Hatoum was born in Lebanon she should not be referred to as Lebanese. She has held a British passport since birth and should be referred to as British/Palestinian or Palestinian/British.

A trophy is the object with which those who offer it make known, in a tangible and permanent way, the appreciation they feel for the person they are giving the prize to. In order for this gesture to attain its full significance, the shape of the trophy should convey the spirit or the identity of those who award it. The creative challenge is greater when the trophy carries the name of an artist with an enormous personality, as in the case at hand. As the formal references to Miró’s work are innumerable and suggestive, a literal transcription could not be considered. It was necessary to find the shape that was a link with Miró’s peculiar spatial grammar without being one of his forms.

Thus, the shape of the trophy recreates a topological space along the lines of Miró’s refined reinterpretation of natural forms. It is both a free form and a weightless form, such as that of a bird flying or a fish romping in the water.

The qualities of titanium, the material with which the trophy is made, of being both the most up-to-date and the most definitive, are also qualities we find in Miró’s work.

The transparent base that supports the trophy as if it were suspended reinforces this image of movement and weightlessness.

Form and matter express in this way the spirit of Miró.

André Ricard
